Art and the Architect.

And if the architect be true to himself, what does he mean by art? Is it what the narrow-minded structural engineer—not the engineer in general, but the narrow-minded structural engineer—for his own immediate, selfish commercial advancement says it is—though deep down in his own heart he knows better—a mere ornamenting of the inherent structure with pretty, or supposedly pretty, decorations? I shall not deny—but rather shall insist—that architects have too frequently given the public, as well as the structural engineer, some show of reason for entertaining at least such a suspicion. Art means, in architecture, not the application of anything, but the presence of a guiding and directing spirit through whose intervention the problem should be so solved that function shall be perfect while through and permeating the material mass the spiritual essence of order, appropriateness and charm shall warmly irradiate. Charm is a rare word, and its essence is all too rarely distilled into architecture. Catch and hold its fleeting beauty. Art in architecture means that the desires of the soul as well as the needs of the body are fully ministered to. In this age it were perhaps better to say the needs of the soul and the desires of the body. So much, and briefly for the art. Now for the profession.—An address by Irving K. Pond, in Architecture.

A new offense was recorded in the Barre city court records yesterday afternoon when a driver of a team was arraigned on the charge of driving by a street car, which was stopped for the purpose of taking on or letting off passengers. Motorists have been before the court prior to this on a similar charge of driving past halted street cars but never before has a team driver been haled into court in Barre. The respondent in this case was G. Piccolini, the driver of a bakery cart. It was alleged that he drove past a street car and barely missed injuring a small boy seriously. Piccolini admitted driving past the car and was fined by Judge Scott the sum of $5, with costs of $6.05, which he arranged to pay. Grand Juror A. A. Sargent was the prosecuting officer, and the respondent was not defended.

A demonstration of the Westinghouse air brake was given last evening by Mr. Tuttle of the Boston & Maine Railroad company in the local Central Vermont railroad yards. The demonstration was given for the engineers, firemen, conductors and other members of the train crews. The demonstration was held in a special car equipped with 32 air tanks of the large size for freight cars, one 11-inch air pump and a 125-horsepower boiler for running it, together with all necessary equipment such as pressure gauges, miniature engines, charts, etc.

The car was brought onto the Central Vermont road for the purpose of getting these large brakes onto the C. V. cars and coaches. Although the Central Vermont uses this kind of brake, it is much smaller than the one demonstrated by Mr. Tuttle. Officials of the Central Vermont Railway company say this is the best equipped demonstration car ever brought onto their road. It will travel on this road about two weeks more, making 30 days in all.

According to the action taken by the Barre city council at a recent meeting, the matter of an all-time chief for the fire department will have to be settled at the meeting to be held on Monday evening, Aug. 4, which is only 10 days away.

It is understood that a few applications for the position have been received by the fire committee which has the matter immediately in charge but that no definite steps have been taken toward recommending anyone for the position, if the present arrangement of part-time chief is to be done away with. At least two applications have been received, or inquiries have been received from two veterans of fire-fighting forces in Massachusetts cities, while other men who have applied or who are being considered are residents of Barre or vicinity. Most of the latter are men without experience or with experience chiefly as callmen of the local department. The Massachusetts men have been receiving good-sized salaries in keeping with the size of the cities which they have served, and there is question whether Barre would be able to pay them anywhere near similar sums because of the narrower financial resources of Barre and because of the more limited demands of the service here. It is expected that if the salaries could be scaled down to a figure commensurate with the size and the financial resources of Barre, one or the other of these possible candidates from Massachusetts might fill the bill acceptably. It is probable, too, that some local man could be secured at a salary somewhat less than would be asked by the Massachusetts men. So there the matter rests at the present time. There is some talk, however, among the people of the city in favor of retaining the present arrangement of part-time chief, with E. M. Tobin in charge, until the way seems clear toward going back to the all-time plan.
